Diesel car owners and dealers in Delhi in for a shock

The diesel car business in the capital has taken a beating after the National Green Tribunal last month directed the transport authorities to de-register 10-year-old diesel vehicles to control pollution.

The decision came as Delhi's car dealers were beginning to take in their stride the Supreme Court ban on 2,000 cc diesel vehicles. The ban, imposed last December, had also affected sales of diesel cars below 2,000 cc in the National Capital Region.

"All of a sudden, buyers are unsure whether their cars can be used after 10 years. This brings down the resale value and affects sales of new diesel cars," said Jnaneswar Sen, senior vice-president, marketing and sales, Honda Cars.

He added there was no rise in enquiries for diesel cars in Delhi last month.

The NGT order was delivered on July 18. The Supreme Court ban is still in place and the court's order based on a final hearing have been reserved since July 4.

Colgate has the best distribution reach in the oral care category with over 5m outlets in India. In fact, it is the second best distributed FMCG brand in the country after HUL's Lifebuoy.

Colgate is also much stronger than its peers in rural India. Colgate's expansion in recent years has only widened the gap between itself and its peers in rural India.

Leader in addition of households last year (with 40m households added as customers worldwide in CY15).

2) Benefits of massive category development efforts Colgate's category development plans are unmatched not just in oral care, but across all FMCG segments in India. For many years now, Colgate has been at the forefront of driving category growth, which enables it to take first-mover advantage in a category with high growth potential. Until FY15, the company's Bright Smiles Bright Futures Program had reached a total of 125m school children in nearly 300,000 schools across the country, including 10m kids in nearly 30,000 schools in FY15 itself. In addition, the company's Oral Health Month Program, in association with dentists, reached 5.5m people in villages last year. No other company in any Indian FMCG category has category development efforts on schools and villages anywhere even close to this scale.

With over 300m people in India not using modern oral care products, these programs are an excellent way of conversion. For a lot of the potential incremental customers, Colgate, because of such efforts, is the first and only oral care brand that they are aware of. With the widest distribution in the category, as brand at more than 3x any other brand in terms of market share and importantly is consistently rated as the most trusted brand across all FMCG products, according to Brand Equity Survey. In fact it is the only brand in India to be consistently in the Top 3 for the last 15 years.

Market share loss in the past three quarters

Colgate India has reported market share decline for three quarters in a row from September 2015 onwards. The company has effectively lost market share of 220bp YoY over this period, of which the last reported period January April 2016 itself reported 160bp decline sequentially. The loss in market share has largely been due to

a. The ongoing herbal wave led by Patanjali, a recent entrant into the category.

b. Wider availability of Patanjali's products, including its oral care products, in modern retail stores like Big Bazaar, D-Mart, Reliance Fresh and Star Bazaar among others, a process that started in October 2015.

Financials

Top-line growth

Given all its above-mentioned strengths and a slew of new launches in the herbal as well as the much larger non-herbal segment, we believe Colgate is well poised not only to arrest its recent market share decline but also to resume market share gains
